Redesigning the website and building an open-source repository of 3D models

eHERITAGE started with a website which didn't exactly fit the idea of our project. A twinning action should emphasize on the activities of the teams, focus on marketing the coordinating team and on communicating with the stakeholders. During the last couple of months, we have worked on building a new web portal which could sustain all these needs. The new site is bilingual, to help the coordinating team (UTBv) in increasing their exposure in their own country, mobile friendly and furthermore, has protected areas which store project templates (Monthly activity report, Internal meeting template, International meeting template, Short external stage report, Conference attendance certificate, Deliverable template, Newsletter template and so on), the Grant Agreement/Consortium Agreement, as well as other sensitive information such as the Risk Register.

We are also in the process of building an online repository which will host free 3D models created by the members of eHeritage. Last but not least, we are planning on expanding the social media channels to fit our activities and operations. We will try to be more active on the following sites:

- Twitter
